The Clueless

He is a little awkward, but pretty sure about what he believes.

I think I have a pretty good grasp on the Bible and how I teach it to my Sunday School class. Granted, I've been asked to step down a few times, but heresy is such a loose term these days. But if you put all the jigsaw pieces of the Bible together, I think I've got a pretty good idea to teach anybody a thing or two.

Offstage voice: Okay, so share some of your knowledge with us.

Oh. Okay, no problem on that one. Uhm...you know the Bible doesn't really get cooking until Moses built the ark. (Begins to ramble) No, wait, he was the one that parted the Red Sea. He was also the one that wrestled with God in the River of Gabok and if it wasn't for that, he wouldn't have been able to part that river too. But that was a foreshadowing, that was a prophecy for the New Testament when Luke would be in the river and say "Hey look I can walk on water" and that was a foreshadowing of King Nebuchadnezzar telling King David, "Go get those people out of that water. Because Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego do not belong there.

And that is how King James became the greatest king of Israel.

The Uber Applicator

He is a bit of a "good-ole boy" with a southern accent.

I believe puttin' words into action, ya know what I mean? It's one thing to talk the talk, but it's another thing to walk the walk. Case in point: I taught my kids the other day about David and Goliath, right? Now my youngest son, he's got mad skills with a sling shot. You know, I could tell you several stories about us puttin' the Word into action. A more recent example is when I was teachin' my boys about Joseph and his brothers, and my oldest son (he starts to get a little choked up) tried to sell his brother to the next door neighbor for a coat. My little entrepreneur...Papa's proud. (Pause) And it was a nice coat.
